The runaway outsailed her and sank, but the lone sailor left aboard cut loose in a boat and, lacking oars, tore up a seat and made a pair that kept him affoat until the fishing schooner Judique picked him up. It was the coasting schooner Hattie McG. Buck that went to the bottom. She was bound from New York for Bangor, with ement, when, on Friday night, thirty-five miles east of here, the Augusta crashed into her.

It was dark and misty at the time, and

It was dark and misty at the time, and the men of the Buck declare they knew nothing of the presence of the other vessel until they saw her bearing directly down upon them. A moment afterwards they felt the crash. The Buck was seen in time by the men of the City of Augusta, but Captain Adams declares he had no expectation of collision.

No sooner had both vessels come together than the Buck swung down alongside the Augusta, and her crew, except one sailor, than the Buck swung down alongside the Augusta, and her crew, except one sailor, numbering five men, including the captain, jumped aboard the Augusta. They had just reached the vessel's deck when their craft extricated herself and filled away and started on a lively gait under full sail. A thick fog then set in and the vessel was obliged to give up her search for the Buck. The captain and five members of the Buck's crew were landed here to-day and then set out in the tug to search for their

ST. PAUL COMMITTEE.

Last Attempt to Complete the Organization Was Futile.

Chicago, Aug. 27.-After repeated at tempts to formulate an agreement, the St. Paul Committee has given up in despair. The last and final meeting with organization in view was held last week, when it was decided to give up the attempt. As a result a report will be made to the presidents at their coming meeting in New York September 18, to the effect that without severe orders from the various heads of roads interested no solution of the St Paul situation will be found.

Why George Heafford Resigned.

Those who profess to be acquainted with the inside fact of the resignation of George H. Heafford, as general passenger agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, tell a very interesting story. Its chief interest iles in the fact that it illustrates the part that the New York financial concerns are taking in the management of the railways of the country. of the country, Mr. Heafford, it is claimed, failed to observe an agreement that was entered into by the St. Paul with New York interests of other lines. He, according to reliable in-formation bruke the commission agreement other lines. He, according to reliable in-formation, broke the commission agreement and was so aggressive in looking after busi-ness for his company that the New York interests who were behind the commission agreement demanded Mr. Heafford's resigagreement demanded at readers resig-nation of the St. Paul's management, it did not come in the way of a suggestion, but certain banking interests insisted that this enterprising and popular general pas-senger agent should retire. In the interest of financial peace the management of the St. Paul conceded the point.

There has been an order issued on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway governing the rate of speed to be maintained by engineers with the new consolidated engines. They must not run faster than a mile in two minutes when the engine is running light or when hauling a freight train unless under very urgent circumstances. This appears to be a most sensible order, for the high speed demanded of freight trains is not only unnecessary, but is expensive in many ways, both in regard to quantity of fuel burnt and in engine repairs. The heavy locomative designed principally for hauling efficiency is very badly racked by the speeds frequently Speed on Freight Trains.

of the dust and cinders and deposits them of the dust and cinders and deposits them in a pan underneath specially prepared for that purpose. The cinder arrester is a small rotary brush that reaches across the bottom of the window and is kept constantly vibrating by the motion of the car. At either side of the window is a curtain attached to a roller concealed within the wall that catches the dust and cinders, which are thrown downward onto the roller. Only the curtain at the front side of the window is pulled out, thus preventing an obstruction of the view. The device is ensity operated and can be regulated to suit the speed of the train. In a test made between Birmingham and Atlanta recently the device caught 95 per cent of the dust and cinders.
